Sunny Chen , Senior Researcher, R3

"China Mobile continues to lead because of its strong brand values and high preference – well above China Telecom and China Unicom" said Sunny Chen, Senior Researcher for R3. "While Nokia performs well in both these factors too, Nike on the other hand leads for strong engagement and association with stars and media in China" she added.

The study, called "En Spire" looks at three critical factors affecting Brand Engagement and Aspiration in China

- Preference within its category, is the brand preferred?
- Engagement is the brand correctly linked with celebrity or media assets?
- Values does the brand have strong associations and values with consumers?

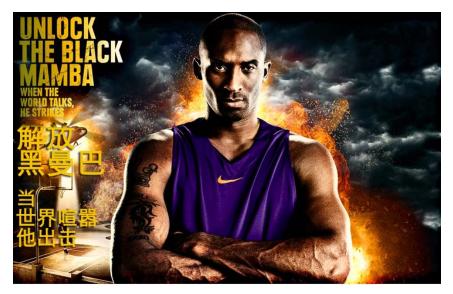

The research is conducted every three months across ten cities in China with a target audience of 15-40 years old.

ONLY 19 OF TOP 50 BRANDS ARE LOCAL

Despite appearances by Lenovo, Li Ning and Mengniu in the Top Ten , local brands are still to build the depth of Brand Value and Asset Leverage of some of their foreign competitors. "Only 19 of the Top 50 brands are local companies, which suggests there are still some gaps in terms of the way they are building preference and values in China" added Ms Chen. "The next few years will be critical to their future growth and success" she added.

Q-ZONE, TAOBAO AND TUDOU LEAD THE WAY ON DIGITAL ASSETS

R3's research also looked at China's strongest online Social Media, Video and Shopping brands for this recent period. Q-Zone, the social media portal from Tencent, led the way. "Q-Zone dominated on both Preference and Values – it's a very popular outlet for young Chinese, matched with a deep opinion from them on the values it offers" said Ms Chen. "Amongst shopping sites, while Taobao leads in these same two areas, it lacks the consumer engagement of Dangdang, 360Buy and other competitors" she added. "We'll closely monitor over coming months whether it can close the gap in these areas
